

RLC Alum Visits PT

The journalism class recently had the privilege of having Steve Korris, former RLC student and sports editor for the Pressing Times, speak to them about pointers on writing for a newspaper and the pro's and con's of being a journalist.

Korris is now a staff reporter for the Mt. Vernon Register News, and has been on their staff for approximately a year and a half. Korris said that he had learned a lot during that time and shared his experiences with the class.

Korris was the first in a series of speakers scheduled to speak to the journalism class. Art Smith, general manager of WFRX in West Frankfort, will speak on Nov. 19 at noon in A212, on the subject of radio journalism. Also Butch Nevious, staff photographer of the Southern Illinoisian, will speak on photo journalism on Dec. 4.

Senate Active

The Homecoming Ballgame has been set up for December 14. The Homecoming Dance has been set for December 15 with the King of Hearts Band, from St. Louis playing. So everyone make plans to attend.

The cheerleaders have decided to adopt red in their colors. Even though they have red in their suits, and the basketball players use red in their suits, red has never officially been adopted as a school color. This has been taken to the Board for approval.

Student Senate has also decided to check into chartering a bus to the basketball games. Shlonda Eastham is checking into the cost per student.

The Student Senate also sponsored a movie called a Girl in My Soup, on Saturday, November 17.

Child Help Program Begun

The new child help program designed to help children in need in Williamson and Franklin counties will begin its initial phase in mid November.

The children who will receive this service range in age from thirteen to seventeen and have experienced identity trouble.

A meeting will be held at RLC, Nov. 21 at noon in the East Conference Room. Anyone interested should contact Bill Young at Marion, (997-4371) or Jo North, Mental Health Clinic in West Frankfort (932-3119).

Bloodmobile Next Week

RLC Asked To Give

Many Rend Lake College clubs have organized a campaign for the coming of the Red Cross Bloodmobile which will be here on Wednesday, November 28.

The Veteran's Club is going to set up all equipment, load and unload. Other clubs participating are SEA, BASIC, Cooth Club, SOBU, Student Senate, and the student nurses from the LPN school. Each club is responsible for getting a certain amount of people to donate blood.

This year's goal for the Bloodmobile is 126 pints of blood. That means that 126 people from RLC will have to give blood to reach the quota, and more than 126 people will have to report to give blood because some will be rejected.

Stephanie Higginson is in charge of the publicity for the Bloodmobile campaign in all outlining communities of RLC. Co-chairman in charge of RLC participation is David Whitney, and Jim Dycus is heading the Veteran's Club.

Miss Pettitt said that she and Mr. Waugh are urging all students in their health classes who can give blood to go on Wednesday, November 28, to the gymnasium and donate blood.

Students and faculty members who wish to give blood, but are afraid of being rejected by something they have heard, should report to the gym for examination. Only the registered nurses can tell you if you are qualified to give blood.

Within ten days after you have donated blood, you will receive a Red Cross card which shows that you have given blood. This card entitles you to the Red Cross blood service. If you or your relatives should need blood, you can contact the Red Cross, and they will immediately send the blood. The only costs that you will have are the hospital costs.

You may be saving another person's life by giving blood on Wednesday, November 28. Won't you give?

WFRX Airs RLC News

Radio station WFRX of West Frankfort is presenting historical reports of Rend Lake College on their Public Affairs Report show.

In all, five reports will be aired on the development of RLC.

The program is presented every Tuesday at 12:35 P.M. and repeated Tuesday evening at 9:30 P.M. on WFRX-FM.

Mr. Art Smith, General Manager of the station, stated that he hoped to receive other reports in the future.

Samford President-Elect

Arthur Samford, history instructor, has been elected to the position of President-Elect of the Faculty Council, to serve during the 1974-75 school year.

Mr. Samford has been on the RLC faculty for over 13 years. His feeling about winning the job was, as he put it, primarily surprise.

The job of Faculty Council president involved being a liaison person between the faculty and administration. He will chair regular faculty and Faculty Council meetings and hopes that he can get some help from past presidents. Dr. Gene Estes is serving in this position this year.

When asked how he expected to do at the job, his reply was, "I'll do the best I can and hope it is good enough to get the job done."

ARTHUR SAMFORD

Library Workshop

Plans are underway for the second meeting of library personnel in the Rend Lake College area to be held Wednesday, Nov. 28, 1973.

After a buffet type meal at 6:30 p.m., topics of book selection and censorship will be discussed. What should go into the curriculum of a two week training course for student librarians is also to be discussed.

This meeting is expected to be of special interest to English teachers and each librarian is urged to make a special effort to bring along a teacher.

Dr. Claxton Talks in Peoria

Dr. Evelyn Claxton, RLC English and journalism instructor, was one of the featured speakers at the sixty-sixth annual Fall Conference of the Illinois Association of Teachers of English.

The conference was held on November 9 and 10 at the Peoria Hilton in Peoria, Illinois.

The theme of the program was "Language: Man's Greatest Accomplishment."

Dr. Claxton led two Saturday morning workshops on Psycholinguistics, in which she discussed the insights into the nature of language learning that this new discipline has made available to English teachers.

RLC Gets Cash Gift

Rend Lake College recently received a check for $500.00 from the Illinois Mining Institute. This award was given to the school in support of the Mining Technology training that RLC now offers.

The money may be used in any way to support the program, either in the form of scholarships, equipment, or any other application that the administration sees fit.

The mining program is a two year course. An Associate in Applied Science Degree may be obtained upon successful completion. The knowledge from this degree should equal about ten years of ordinary experience as a mine worker. This would be a definite factor when making application for work at a mine.

Ardell Kimmel, Dean of Vocational-Technical Education, invites anyone interested in the program to contact him at Rend Lake College for more information.

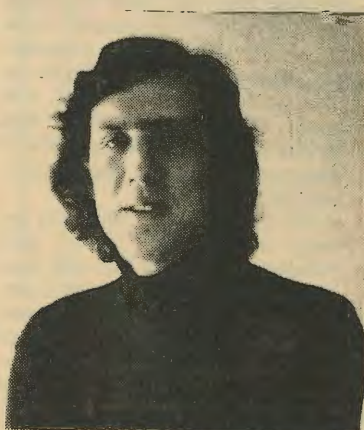

Metric System, Anyone?

Jeff Collins, Glen Sinks, Sue Stiff, Roger Tinsley, Sam Todd, Kristie Martin, and Mr. Heaton have volunteered to change all English system Measures in "The Pressing Times" to the metric system.

The United States is the last big country that has not changed to the metric system. Even Canada, the origin of the English system, has converted to the metric system. Canada is now in the process of changing to the metric system.

There is a bill in a subcommittee of the Congress now which proposes conversion to the metric system. It is predicted that by spring the bill will pass the Senate and the House of Representatives. Then the United States will begin a nationwide conversion project which will take approximately twelve years.

Photos Displayed

The photographs that are currently hanging in the halls of the Oasis are being displayed by David Gilmore, assistant professor of Cinema and Photography in the Department of Communications and Fine Arts, SIU-C.

He is a graduate of Ohio University and holds a Master of Fine Arts in Photography. He has completed several research projects in the production of photographs and the use of photographic silk screen.

Gilmore's work has been displayed in Design Gallery,

Northern Illinois University and the Silver Image Gallery at Ohio State University.

The silk screen abstractions are only a step away from the reality of the original photographs. The collection deals mainly with the relationship between three dimensional subjects and the two dimensional prints.

Also included in this collection are a series of black and white prints, taken from a car window. These pictures are open-end and the subjects seem to be mainly street corners.

Vet Work-Study Program Set

Soon there will be a Veterans Work Study Program in operation at RLC. Jim Dycus, Outreach Worker here, and James Yates, Director of Admissions, are jointly putting their efforts together to get the program started.

For those who are not familiar, it is a federally funded program designed to give the veteran a part time job. The job itself will deal with veterans affairs and hopefully offer experience in the individuals field of study.

The only requirement is that the person be a veteran and willing to work. Anyone may fill out an application.

On the application there is a place for a recommendation from the school. Dycus said that individuals who in the past have put forth special efforts or have shown interests in veterans affairs will receive a good recommendation from Mr. Yates.

The program specifies that a veteran may receive up to 100 hours of work at $2.50 an hour. Work hours received may be less than the maximum.

Anyone interested may obtain an application from Dycus, or Mr. Yates office in the Administration Building.

Music Review

By Steve Hubbard

Barbara Watts

The new Mitchell Art Museum, Mt. Vernon, was the setting for a concert given by the Rend Lake Civic Symphony, Tuesday, Nov. 6. The 43 member orchestra was under the direction of Keith E. Drayton, new instrumental music teacher at RLC.

The orchestra, composed primarily of RLC students and members of the college district, opened the concert by standing and playing "The Star Spangled Banner."

The impressive setting was matched by an outstanding performance by the orchestra, reflected by the enthusiastic response of the audience of nearly 250.

During the first half of the concert, the orchestra played three numbers: Reed's "A Festival Prelude"; Bach's "Prelude in C Minor"; and Schubert's "Symphony in B Minor."

During the fifteen minute intermission, the audience had an opportunity to tour the Museum to see the outstanding collection of American art housed there.

The second half of the concert opened with Wagner's "March of the Meistersingers." The orchestra then played Dvorak's "Slavonic Dance No. 1 (Opus 46, N. 1)." They played the well-known "Boston Pops March," and finished the program with highlights from "Mame."

Dr. J. M. Snyder, RLC President, commented with pride on the many enthusiastic comments he heard after the concert on the performance of the orchestra.

Flab vs. Gab?

Attention RLC students! Don't miss the Faculty vs. Vets Club basketball game on Dec. 4, 6:15 p.m., at RLC gym. It's the game of the century and promises to go down in RLC's history as the Battle of the Bulge. The game will be played prior to the regularly scheduled RLC conference game with Southeastern.

Already the faculty has lashed out with threats of vigorous reprisals if the Vets Club should win. Vice-president Jim Dodds of the Vets Club said that he heard rumors that Myron Foley, known to his teammates as "The Enforcer", plans to buy the Vets practice sessions. It is also believed that Dr. Ward will cover for Foley if he is caught. Due to these rumors the Vets Club fears that faculty retaliation will be felt at semester exam time.

I interviewed some of the faculty players and came to the conclusion that they may have some talent. Most knew that a basketball was round and some even knew the basic fundamentals.

Here are some of the comments I received in my interviews: Mr. Kern — "Our superior speed and condition will allow us to run the vets off the floor"; Dr. Doherty — "We will try our best against the vets. We have heard they use dirty tactics and that is why we have recruited Myron Foley"; Mr. Turner — "With me playing the pivot, jumpin' Jim Summers won't have a chance"; and Skip Witunski, noted guard for the faculty team, said and quote, "Playing the Vets Club will be like entering a Jackass in the Hambletonian!"

One unidentified source claimed that the faculty will be considerably handicapped because they are having to carry the administration on their squad.

Tom Glenn, WMIX celebrity and vet guard, said he heard that the faculty was negotiating a trade with U of I — Mr. Youngusband for Harv Schmidt.

The vets feel that they have a good chance to win if they will be allowed to have a beer boy instead of a water boy.

Even Art Samford commented about the game. He is afraid there will be a great demand for substitute teachers in the weeks preceding the game.

Putting everything aside, it promises to be a good show for the spectators. Everyone is welcome to attend and autographs can be collected after the game. This may be your last chance to see these players in action.

Remember — game time is 6:15 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 4, at Rend Lake College gym. Admission for both games is $1.00 for adults, 50c for students without I.D.'s.

Thick as a Brick

Remember about three or four years ago when you would split a six pack about three ways and listen to Three Dog Night in your car stereo? Back then they were really good but at Southern a couple of weeks ago it wasn't quite the same.

Three Dog Night have had some big hits in their time and to some people that would be a swell reason to see them. They would be okay to see if you had your best girl at your side and at the moment that's my best excuse. But tell me, would you really pay to see them again?

If you were at the concert you saw the likes of the Wizard who played the organ and synthesizer as a fill in while the Dogs were offstage changing. Normally a drum solo would have been played so it was pretty good that he was there.

After the Wizard was through tinkering with the synthesizer the Dogs were back on state dressed for the fifties in their flashy pink outfits and some music your old lady was probably reelin' to at the hop.

But overall there was something lacking from the concert. Maybe it was because nobody was screaming "sit down" and nobody was throwing frisbees, hardly anybody was smoking and there wasn't that much drinking going on either. You sort of missed passing the bottle around and throwing what you could at the people who were usually standing in front of the stage. Man, where have all the good times gone?

Concerts coming to St. Louis will be Black Oak, Nov. 21 and the Doobey Brothers, Nov. 31. Both of these concerts will be at Kiel. December 1 brings Hawk Wind to St. Louis at the American Theatre. Maybe at these concerts you can go and throw your bottle, old shoes, and maybe even throw up and still have a good time.

SPACESHIP

By Bob Modglin

Feel the power, feel it within your soul as the ship you ride gives you all her power, lifting you skyward on a tail of flame. She has given you the freedom you have longed so much for. Lifting you higher and higher into the blackness of the Universe.

Skyward she takes you to the freedom that you know is there waiting. For a moment of time you feel the great loneliness, but it is just a moment. Suddenly there is a new awareness of her power to take you to the freedom many men will never feel.

Suddenly in the blackness there is a light-so bright that it hurts your eyes even you see that it is the Sun, in all of it's glory. A giant ball of fury on a background of jewels. You stop breathing for a second of time. Is this the freedom men seek.

Here the feeling of smallness is so great. Still she takes you out and out, farther and farther away into this void of blackness. Now at last you have found the freedom you seek—that all mankind seeks.

NATHANIEL FOOTE AND ELLY

A year ago this past July, I met what has to be the most colorful couple I've ever seen. The place was Gulnare, Colorado, a small town at the foot of Spanish Peaks, in the south central part of the state.

I was in Colorado on vacation, at a friend's ranch. It was a drizzly, rainy, cold evening. We were sitting around the fire talking, when someone knocked on the door. I opened the door and there, stood a bearded, wet, somewhat dirty looking man, with a floppy western hat, and a dripping poncho. He told us his name was Nathaniel Foote, and he and his wife Elly needed shelter from the storm.

Given permission to spend the night, they bedded their four horses down in a shed and came in the house. After talking with them a while, I found out he and his wife Elly had been traveling for two years. They started from the southern tip of South America and were headed for Alaska to homestead. He was a writer, and made what money they had selling stories and photographs to newspapers, sports magazines, and journals.

His wife Elly, I found to be very interesting. She was Swedish, had blond hair and blue eyes. Her hair was dried from sun and exposure. Her skin was tanned and her lips were chapped, and she spoke with an accent. She was dressed in faded jeans, an old plaid shirt, grubby looking boots, and a small dirty western hat. She sure looked the part of a weary trail hardened traveller.

Nathaniel and Elly had met in Spain, while going to journalism school. They married, and on completion of their schooling decided to make their trek.

To me, the life they were living was one everyone dreams of but never has the chance to live. They were just taking their time, sort of living off the land, and enjoying every minute as it came.

I'll never forget meeting them and if someday Nate Foote becomes a famous writer, I can say I met and shook his hand at the foot of Spanish Peaks Colorado.

RLC Agriculture

Pictured are displays that have been erected by students of the agricultural occupations class taught by Leavell Swink. A display, a requirement of the class, is assembled by groups of three students every Tuesday and remains in place until it is graded, which is usually on Friday. At times, the students are required to make up displays when doing on-job-training in a business during the spring and summer. This provides them with training to perform this particular task when needed.

The best exhibits will have a theme, motion, clearly printed signs, color, neatness, simplicity, plus many other characteristics too numerous to mention.

Each year, speakers are invited to speak to the agricultural occupations class taught by Leavell Swink. The purpose of having the speakers, who are usually managers, owners, or representatives of a certain agricultural business, is to acquaint the students with the opportunities available, characteristics required of the job or similar jobs, range of salary, experience and education recommended, plus many other items of information.

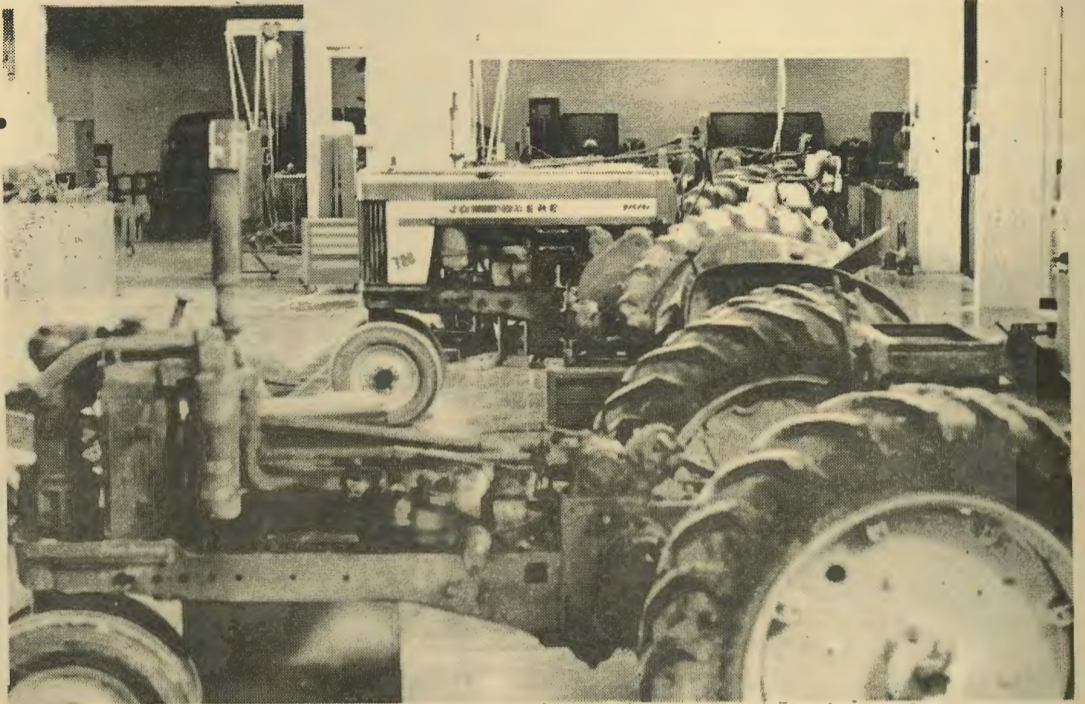

RLC Hosts Grain Mtg.

A Grain Drying Meeting will be held Friday, Dec. 7, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at RLC.

The program is jointly sponsored by the Agricultural Extension Councils of Jefferson, Franklin, and Perry Counties and the RLC Ag Department.

The speaker for the program will be Harvey Hirning, University of Illinois agricultural engineering specialist. Hirning will cover the use of grain preservatives in storing corn, selecting a grain drying system, managing a grain drying and handling system, types of drying systems, temperature and humidity control, plus other topics.

In addition to the formal program, area representatives of grain bin companies have been invited to have table top displays at the meeting. This will give farmers an opportunity to talk with grain bin representatives at noon and following the meeting.

CAREERS IN AGRICULTURE

Agriculture is the world's biggest business. It includes, but is definitely not limited to, the occupation of farming. It would be impossible to list all the career opportunities available in agriculture.

Approximately 50 percent of the total labor force in the country is employed in an area related to agriculture with about 15,000 job opportunities becoming available each year. This presents an outstanding opportunity for farm-reared youth who enjoy agriculture but do not have an opportunity to own and operate their own farms. Also, many people without farm backgrounds, but with an interest in agriculture and business, have found successful careers in the agricultural industry.

Rend Lake College offers five programs in agriculture. The programs, their length, and degree received, are listed below:

1. Agricultural Transfer—Two years—Associate in Arts Degree
2. Agricultural Business—Two years—Associate in Applied Science Degree
3. Agricultural Mechanics—Two years—Associate in Applied Science Degree
4. Agricultural Production—Two years—Associate in Applied Science Degree
5. Agricultural Production—One year—Certificate

These programs are housed in a new vocational building, completed during the summer of 1973. The classes are supported by approximately $150,000 worth of laboratory and shop equipment. The method of teaching in these programs emphasizes the application of theory to practical situations. Each student has many opportunities for actual "hands on" work experience.

SUPERVISED OCCUPATIONAL EXPERIENCE—Students are placed in an agriculture business for two 8-week training periods during the two-year program. During these on-the-job training periods, the student is under the supervision of the employer and an instructor from the college. Students are paid a wage for the satisfactory work they perform. But the primary objective is to expose the student to actual work practices so he may develop the necessary skills and proficiency for gainful employment at the mid-management level.

Capstone program—Southern Illinois University School of Agriculture is offering a new educational program called "Capstone" which enables qualified students who have graduated from a two year vocational program to obtain a B.S. degree in two more years at S.I.U. After a student attends Rend Lake College for a couple semesters, one may determine that furthering his or her education may be the proper thing to do. The student does not lose any educational time because of going through a vocational program.

 A new club has been started on campus. It goes by the unofficial title of Ag. Club. The Club's main purpose is to have a more friendly relationship between students and instructors. Goals of the club for the first year are to have a harvest dance by Christmas; host all high school FFA activities; put out test plots this coming spring; and to have 50 members by January 1, 1974. All students that have at least one class pertaining to agriculture are eligible to be a member. The club will meet at 7 a.m. once a month

New Golf Course To Open

SPORTS EDITORIAL:

By Dennis Rice
Sports Editor

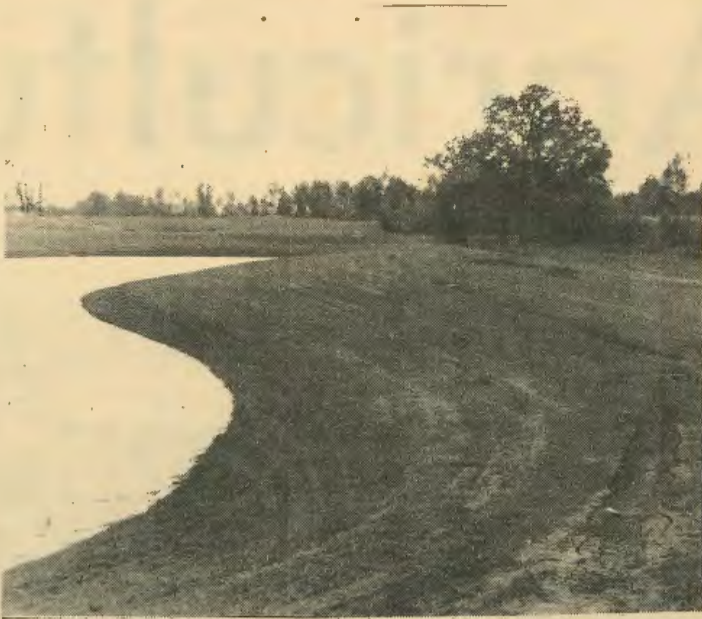

Turning our thoughts aside from basketball for a moment, let's take a look at the Pro Football scene this year. There is a possibility that the Minnesota Vikings could be 17-0, and repeat the performance of the Miami Dolphins of last season.

Don't be surprised though if Miami wins it all again, even though they were beaten by the Oakland Raiders earlier this season. The NFL is getting more balanced each year, and it will be very difficult for the Vikings to go all the way, so, my Super Bowl winner could be an underdog, or it may not, but I'll pick the Pittsburgh Steelers to win it all in January.

They were beaten by the Cincinnati Bengals this season, for their only defeat, but they impressed me so very much when they defeated the Raiders at Oakland on November 11. I had told my friends before the season started that I picked Pittsburgh to be champions, and I'll stay with that, though I'll probably be wrong, as I usually am.

As for the Pittsburgh opponent in Super Bowl VIII, it's going to be a dogfight for the NFC Championship. Logic would tell me to probably pick the Vikings, Rams, George Allen's Over-the-hill gang, or even the onsurging Atlanta Falcons, but I think that the Dallas Cowboys will rise to the occasion and win the NFC, only to fall short to Gerela's Gorillas, and Franco's Italian Army.

suggested but the Board felt this particular site was the best because of its location near the Interstate and the particular lay of the terrain.

Mr. Feltmeier stated that the total cost of the new course would be in the neighborhood of $685,000.00 However, this also includes a pro shop.

Lawrence Packard, an architect from La Grange, Illinois, designed the course. The contractor was Bret Wadsworth of Plainfield, Illinois. Mr. Feltmeier spoke highly of these two men and felt both were highly qualified for the job.

The course will be owned by the Rend Lake Conservancy District Board and at the present time no one has been hired to care or manage the course.

Tom Fleri, Rend Lake College student and member of the golf team, gave his views on the course. "This will definitely be the best golf course in Southern Illinois when completed. It will be a tricky and challenging course to play."

The RLC golf team plans to make use of the course by holding all of their home meets there. The golf class may also use it and it may be used for tournaments when it is completely finished.

Golf enthusiasts will be pleased to hear that a new 18 hole golf course is under construction near the Interstate 57 and Route 183 interchange.

The golf course is part of a new recreational area that will be built in the future. The whole project was set up by the Rend Lake Conservancy District Board.

Frank Feltmeier, owner of Mt. Vernon Glass and a member of the Conservancy District Board, stated that the course is expected to open in the Spring of 1974 with the front nine holes playable.

Mr. Feltmeier also gave a short description of the course saying, "The first nine holes of the course are fairly open in that there are not many tricky areas in them and are not as wooded. The nine holes are located near the Interstate and can actually be seen from Interstate traffic."

"The back nine are laid out in a wooded, hilly area and will be more tricky to play. They are right next to the lake and parts of the lake are used as water traps."

Mr. Feltmeier stated that not many major trees were cut down during the construction so the course is located in a wooded area.

The Conservancy District Board also has long range plans for a resort hotel, convention facilities, a motel, a marina site and a cottage area.

The Conservancy District Board bought up some 1000 acres around this area when former governor Otto Kerner was in office. Many other sites were

Jones Wins Shotgun

Bob Jones, RLC social science teacher, won the drawing for the shotgun sponsored by the Trap and Skeet Club.

Mr. Jones' first words were, "I've never won anything in my life!" as he was presented the Winchester Model 1400 12 gauge automatic.

Drawing was held Nov. 8 on the west balcony of the Oasis. Surrounded by members of the Trap and Skeet Club and hopeful chance holders, Toni Razer reached in and drew out Mr. Jones' name. (And she isn't even in one of his classes.)

The Trap and Skeet Club was organized this year. Mike Kelley is president; Jim Dycus, secretary-treasurer; and Mr. Brammeier is faculty sponsor.

The money from the raffle will be used to buy an automatic reloader for the club. Also the club plans to buy shooting vests with the RLC insignia stamped on the back.
