Conserve energy
From April 6 to April 26, RLC is partaking in a national contest called "Compete to Reduce." Help RLC win by reducing your carbon footprint with simple things like powering down a computer after use, using an automatic door opener only when necessary, and turning out a light after you leave a room. These can all help RLC reach its goal. What will you do to conserve energy? (Photo by Taylor Blankenship / Clocktower Chronicle Staff Photographer)

ights are going out around campus lately. No, it's not because they didn't pay the bill. From April 6 to April 26, Rend Lake College is taking part in a special "Compete to Reduce" competition sponsored by Campus Conservation Nationals (CCN) which, according to www.competetoreduce.org, is the largest electricity and water reduction competition for colleges and universities in the world.

According to RLC Sustainability Professional Tyson Ellis, RLC is joining forces with 175 other colleges and universities across North America to reduce the collective carbon footprint. Ellis mentioned that RLC is specifically competing against John A. Logan, Heartland, and Lewis & Clark Community College to see which institution can lower its power usage percentages the most by April 26.

The goal of this contest, at this point, is to promote awareness of energy consumption that many take for granted.

"A lot of us aren't aware exactly how much waste we produce in our lives, whether it is energy or water," Ellis stated, noting that the first step toward change is aware-

Posters can be seen around campus, promoting slogans like "Turn Off April" and "You can save the universe." RLC recently took a big, power-saving step by installing LED lights in the parking lots. They operate on a timed switch. Ellis mentioned that anyone on campus wishing to take part can assist in this endeavor via many simple means, such as printing on both sides of a sheet of paper instead of only one while working on homework at the LRC or elsewhere on campus, and unplugging any unnecessary electronic devices.

Other simple ways to help out include making sure all classroom computers that are not in use remain turned off, and making sure all lights are switched off when the last person exits a room. Also, only using the automatic door buttons if they are absolut required is a good way to save RLC some energy.

According to Ellis, at the end of this contest, the RLC departments that have shown the most initiative and which have helped save the most energy by "powering down" at the end of the day will qualify for a special congratulatory dinner to be held at a date to be specified.

CCN will announce the results and give out their prizes on Friday, May 8. Among the prizes being given out is a high-tech electricity and water monitoring dashboard, sponsored by Lucid, which will provide an interactive and engaging way to bring data to the cam-

As mentioned in a previous press release, the energy used each day will be monitored and checked by actual RLC students who visit the Physical Plant to meet Maintenance Technician Charles Massie, the man responsible for gathering up all the data.

The CCN has been helping colleges organize this competition since the pilot year of 2010. On the case studies page of the CCN website there are testimonials from colleges such as Berea College in Kentucky which used this competition to lower their energy usage by more than 11 percent, as well as Appalachian State University in North Carolina which lowered its energy consumption a

Pope John VIII ordered Formosus' excommunication for, among other things, deserting his diocese without papal permission, despoiling the cloisters in Rome and conspiring with "certain iniquitous men and women for the destruction of the papal see." The excommunication was lifted in 878, but Formosus had to agree never to return to Rome or exercise his priestly functions. This would seem to be a career-killer, but in 883, Pope Marinus I restored the disgraced cardinal to his diocese. Finally, in 891, Formosus' rehabilitation was complete, when he was unanimously elected to succeed Pope Stephen

Scott Taaka wins RLC Essay Contest

CLOCKTOWER CHRONICLE STAFFWRITER n February, the RLC Writing Center held its inaugural "Write Now" student essay contest. The prompt was that students had to write a oneto two-page paper explaining why they chose their current major. The winner of this contest was freshman Scott Taaka, who is part of the Nursing Program here at Rend Lake College. Taaka, who is enrolled in Barbara Hampton's preparation for college English class, wrote his essay about why he decided to pursue a career in nursing.

WHY THE MEDICAL FIELD

— By Scott Taaka

The satisfaction I get from caring for others has taken me down a road I didn't know I was on. Twenty-two years ago my son was born. He had trouble from the start fighting off infection. This led to a conclusion that daycare wasn't working out as he couldn't go two weeks without a trip to the doctor for a new infection. My son, Alex, would have to stay at home to avoid as much contact as possible with germ-filled environments.

Who would be the caregiver? This choice was made for us as my wife had good insurance where she worked and I had none at the mine. So I quit my job, or took, as I called it, an unpaid sabbatical and became "Mister Mom" to my son. It turned out I was pretty good. Alex's health slowly turned around and he began to thrive. He still had problems, but they were much fewer and father in between.

Looking back on the three years as a stay-athome dad, I can now believe that was the start of a desire to tend to the needs of others. I assumed I felt this way because it was familyrelated and only that, nothing more. There have been other clues to a type of maternal instinct, which I never picked up on. Like when I would have preferred to be in the kitchen talking and preparing a holiday meal instead of watching T.V. in the living room with the guys. Also, when my wife and I took an aerobics class together, I was the first and only male for a long time. Hanging out and talking with the traditional caregivers was comfortable for me. I suppose I buried these thoughts and feelings, as I had no real outlet for them.

Then the opportunity to return to my old work arose and I took it. Returning back to work would boost the family income. It would also reassert my manhood that had taken some damage from the teasing I sometimes endured for being a stayat-home dad.

Thirteen years ago I lost the job I had returned to and had to look for other employment. I started helping out at the hospital as a contractor and it soon turned into full-time work. Every once in a while I was asked to do something minor in helping a patient. I enjoyed helping the nurses even in the small ways like holding a wheelchair or moving a patient in a bed down the hall. Six years ago the hospital was not going to keep my contracting work full-time, so I was again looking for employment.

I went on to work in an assisted living facility. As the only guy in an allwoman staff who were mostly small young ladies, I was helping out with the residents when asked. This is where I saw firsthand the need for proper care to prevent medical issues from causing a great deal of pain and suffering. The staff and residents were like family. I enjoyed taking care of them for the three years I was there.

The hospital maintenance director called and told me a full-time employment position was available and it was double the pay I was making at the time. I took the job and brought with me the desire and knowledge of the care people needed that I had observed. Last year I found out I could become a certified nursing assistant through the summer evening classes at the MarketPlace and still work, so I enrolled.

Now I have the training, confidence and desire to assist with patients, but I need to do more. My best option, as a later-in-life student, is to get an associate degree in nursing and pass the state's registered nurse boards. I will then be able to fulfill my goal of helping patients at the hospital while making a living wage.

I will always remember them and the respect they had for me as a professor. It's a distinct honor and privilege to be recognized here today."

BY REANNE PALMER
RLC SPORTS INFORMATION ODFREY, III. (April 13, 2015) — The Rend Lake College Women's Tennis team suffered a 3-6 loss over the weekend to Lewis & Clark Community College in the Region XXIV finals. The loss ends RLC's spring campaign with a 4-2

Sophomores Evelyn Mendez (Benton) and Marisa Uhls (Mt. Vernon) won All-Region honors in singles. Uhls and Katie Wall (Mt. Vernon) also won All-Region honors in doubles.

"The match came down to a tiebreaker and a close loss in doubles," Coach Dave Junkins posted on social media. "I'm very proud of this group and how they played hard. They represented Rend Lake College with sportsmanship and a respect for the game. Thanks for a great season ladies."

On Friday, RLC advanced to the region final by defeating Kaskaskia College 9-0 in Centralia. Sophomores Sydney Crews (Mt. Vernon), Paige

Hutchcraft (Benton), Mendez, Uhls and Wall, and freshman Emily Culbreth (Benton) defeated their opponents in singles and doubles.

"It was by far the most dominate effort of the year," Junkins said about the win over KC.

Comanches Franklin, Williams a frontcourt cotch for House's Illorriors

NA, III. (April 10, 2015) - Verbal commitments by Cahokia High School's Jeremy Franklin and Devonte Williams became official this week. The two signed national letters of intent to play their college hoops at Rend Lake College next year, making them Randy House's first two recruits of the season.

Franklin, a 6-6 power forward, is known for his shooting ability and effort on the court. House said his dedication and incredible athletic ability will make him an asset to the team. Likewise, 6-10 center Williams brings defensive skills and good footwork to the floor. Last year for the Cahokia Comanches, Williams was ranked 17th in the state for blocked shots per game (2.61).

"They're both great kids," said RLC Assistant Coach Tommy Holder. "They will come in, work hard, and be enthusiastic around the rest of the team. Those are
