Economic Impact Study highlights RLC's role in local economy

BY REANNE PALMER

RLC PUBLIC INFORMATION dds are you or someone you know has been affected by Rend Lake College's economic impact in the last decade, whether that be directly from graduating with a degree or certificate and a subsequent increase in wages, or indirectly through a number of capital projects.

A new "Economic Impact of Rend Lake College" (EIS) report investigated the many economic contributions RLC makes in the region, in what the study calls "the least measured and understood" strength of the college. The report was prepared by the Center for Governmental Studies at Northern Illinois University (NIU) in partnership with the Illinois Community College Board (ICCB) and the Illinois Department of Employment Security (IDES).

The source of community college student employment and earnings data is the Unemployment Insurance (UI) wage record data reported by Illinois employers for each of their employees. UI data are collected on a quarterly basis by the IDES. Using these data, the EIS examined student enrollment and completion data over a 12year period and matched earnings data with students who graduated or otherwise left the college for two, full, consecutive semesters.

Of RLC's strengths, the EIS states that the college, "adds skills for the local workforce; boosts the competitiveness of area businesses; graduates individuals who generate millions of dollars in local, state, and federal tax revenues; and increases earnings for workers who have graduated."

RLC President Terry Wilkerson knows the importance of the college to the local communities and sees the positive effects it has on a day-to-day basis.

"The faculty and the staff at Rend Lake College know the significance of being a community college that continues to have a huge impact on local people and businesses," said Wilkerson. "We know that we can go to almost any business in the area and find an RLC grad or someone who has attended to improve their existing skills. We're training our friends and neighbors here, and this Economic Impact Study is affirmation that we're doing something right for them."

Among the biggest benefits of RLC are the opportunities it opens for students who attend and graduate. The EIS states that a 25-year-old program graduate of RLC can expect a total lifetime earnings gain of $602,000 — a 46 percent increase over those not completing a community college pro-

Additionally, students who completed their education at RLC in 2011 have seen a $5,644 increase in earnings over their pre-enrollment wages.

"It's proven that a community college education is both an investment and a savings for those who take advantage of our services," said Wilkerson. "By setting aside time to complete a program or certificate at RLC, students are foregoing earnings, but the rate of return on that investment is well worth it."

In the year following completion, 81 percent of students who graduated in 2011 were employed in Illinois, which is slightly higher than the

Why all the fuss over 'Black Friday?'

BY SHELBY PATTERSON CLOCKTOWER CHRONICLE STAFFWRITER

ith the Thanksgiving holiday right around the corner, many people are setting their sights upon the day after the feast — Black Friday.

November is filled with thoughts of gratitude as people celebrate Thanksgiving at the end of the month. Turkeys are carved, feasts are prepared, the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade usually plays on the TV in the background...all fond memories from childhoods past.

In recent years, the craze for Black Friday has steadily gotten more extreme. Stores have begun opening earlier and earlier to slash their competition and serve their customers. A lot of retail chain stores, like Walmart, have now begun their

Black Friday deals on Thanksgiving night — cutting into the holiday time of their employees...all for a good bargain. This year, the retail chain is advertising a five-day Black Friday sales event, with doors opening at 6 p.m. Thanksgiving night.

The term "Black Friday" was first coined in the 1960s — to mark the kickoff of the Christmas shopping season. Since then, the popularity of the day has grown. Police in Philadelphia came up with the term after complaining about the busy streets, bustling with motorists and pedestrians. "Black" references stores moving from the "red" to "black" — way back when accounting records were recorded by hand. Red ink symbolized loss and black represented profit. Since the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade kicked off in 1924, the day after Thanksgiving has become an unofficial holiday as the start to a busy and bustling holiday shopping season. It has become so popular because retailers began to realize that they could lure many shoppers into their stores with one-day-only specials and slashed prices. The most sought-after items tend to be electronics and toys.

As Thanksgiving approaches, many newspapers and websites will be chocked full of Black Friday ads, hoping to entice customers to check out their deals. As we recognize this time to be thankful for all of the blessings in our lives, don't let the excitement of great deals take away from what this time and holiday is truly about.

statewide average of 77 percent. Looking further back, 92 percent of students who graduated in 2005 were employed in Illinois within five years after completion.

RLC students also make up a large portion of taxpayers in the district. Both enrollees and completers from 2003 have paid an estimated $80 million in state taxes and $268 million in federal taxes combined through 2012.

The college is among the largest employers in the district and continues to generate additional economic benefits for local communities through expenditures and employment impacts. In 2012, almost 420 faculty and staff members lived in the district, with a total payroll of almost $13.2 million.

The college also purchases goods and services from local communities, in addition to income earned and then spent by employees, to further boost the local economy. In 2012, RLC reported $10.6 million in operating and capital expenditures. As these expenditures mixed into the local economy, RLC's direct and indirect expenditures approached a total of $19.5 million in value and 500 jobs, according to the study.

"Like me, many of our faculty and staff are Rend Lake graduates themselves who see the value in a post-secondary education and are driven by the need to pass their knowledge on to others," said Wilkerson. "While our employees are a big factor in the local economy, we also work with other businesses for projects, like the recent Pathway to Success or renovations to the art classrooms, and those businesses employ their own people who in turn continue to pump money back out. It's one big cycle that I'm proud to say RLC is a vital part of."

The EIS report also delved into the characteristics of students and program enrollment at RLC to better understand the economic impact. These students attended RLC between 2000 and 2012.

Overall, there has been an increase of about 3,100 enrollments at RLC in credit courses, going from 11,344 in 2000 to 14,469 in 2012. The rate of increase in program completers has also increased, according to the study, from 518 in 2000 to 877 in 2012, a 69.3 percent increase.

The study also found more students enrolling immediately after high school with the declining age of enrollees. The average age of students enrolling in 2000 was 37.3, and the number decreased to 34.7 in 2012. In fact, the percentage of enrollees aged 24 or less increased from 25.3 to 35.2 during those same years. Likewise, the average age of completers also decreased from 27.4 to 26.6 years.

Veteran enrollment has also increased at RLC, with a total of 790 veterans making up 5.5 percent of the total enrollment at RLC in 2012. They were 3.8 percent of the completers in 2012 as well. That same year, RLC was awarded its first of three consecutive Military Friendly School recognition's by veteranowned business Victory Media. The credit was the result of a survey of approximately 8,000 schools based on their support of military stu-

Of all the enrollees, the largest percentage of students (51.5 percent in 2012) indicate that improving skills for a current job as their purpose for attending RLC. Other large groups have been personal interest, followed by those preparing for a future job. Students pursuing an associate degree made up the majority of completers every year from 2000 to 2012.

Three programs represented 80 percent of all enrollments: vocational skills, baccalaureate instruction, and transfer instruction. Of those, four broad instructional programs stand out with 88 percent of enrollments in 2012, including health professions and related sciences; liberal arts and sciences, general studies and humanities; engineeringrelated technologies; and multi- or interdisciplinary sciences.

Health professions improved the most from 11 percent in 2000 to 45 percent in 2012. The same programs also had the largest percent of completers in 2012 at 35 percent, followed by liberal arts and sciences at 24 percent.

Kim Robert, RLC Dean of Allied Health, said the increase in enrollment into the health care programs and certificates is largely due to the growth in options for students and the bigger need in the community to care for an aging population.

"Since 2007, we've added two new Allied Health degrees in the Certified Medical Assistant, which is also a certificate, and the Radiologic Technology programs. We also have seven certificates for more specified instruction," said Robert. "In our district alone, there is a growing need for people in the health care industry that can't be filled quickly enough, resulting in more of our students getting jobs immediately following graduation. It's wonderful to see the huge growth in attendees and graduates who are getting back out into the workforce."

Modeled after a statewide economic impact analysis of Illinois Community Colleges, the EIS for RLC was commissioned to better understand the return from investing in the college. About 15 individuals from NIU, the ICCB, and the IDES contributed to developing the report.

RLC is one of 39 community colleges in the state that play a vital role in the educational and workforce preparation of the individuals and communities they serve. RLC provides high-quality, accessible, and cost-effective educational opportunities for residents in an eight-county area in Southern Illinois that includes portions of Franklin, Hamilton, Jefferson, Perry, Washington, Wayne, White, and Williamson counties.

Founded in 1955 as Mt. Vernon Community College, RLC offers academic and career technical instruction through associate degree, transfer, or certificate programs of study as well as adult and continuing education programs that serve as a gateway to higher education for many community residents, employers, and K-12 students. Courses are offered on the RLC main campus in Ina, at satellite campuses in Pinckneyville and Mt. Vernon, and through online

designed to encourage seniors to improve on grades and attendance during their last year. Two students who have the best improvement in grades and attendance are awarded one-year full scholarships to RLC through the Foundation, said RLCF CEO Shawna

Bullard.

"The STRIVE students did the job shadowing with the help of the Rotary Clubs, the Jefferson Countv Chamber of Commerce. and the Foundation. It's the first time we've done this activity, and there will be about 55 to 60 students all over the county participating," said Bullard. "We're fortunate to have students coming to our campus who are interested in the unique Cosmetology and Applied Science and Technology programs we have, and we hope to be able to encourage them to continue their education after high school."

Students from all over Jefferson County participated, including those from MVTHS, Waltonville High School, Webber Township High School, and Woodlawn High School. After the job shadowing in the morning, Crossroads Community Hospital sponsored a lunch for the students before they returned to school.

For more information about the STRIVE program, contact the RLC Foundation at (618) 437-5321, Ext. 1214 or foundation@rlc.edu.
